Taxation Of Mortgages

The state board of assessors, a body composed of the assessors from every county in the state, has decided that all mortgages should be subject to taxation. Governor Oddie, as chairman of the board, has also stated that he is in favor of this plan. The last legislature passed a law wherein the boards of equalization of the various counties were to levy a tax upon mortgages, but when it came to place the law in operation a serious obstacle was encountered.

Objections were first raised when it was asserted that a system of double taxation was being enforced. It was correctly stated that a tax was levied upon the property and also upon the mortgage. Two distinct sums were collected whereas on unencumbered property but one amount was exacted. So great was the storm of protest that the various boards of commissioners declared the law unconstitutional without further proceedings and continued along under the old law.

One of the chief sources of trouble was in arriving at a definite value of property. The assessor would submit a report that he had assessed the property for an amount—say $2000. A mortgage upon record would show that the owner of the property had borrowed $3000, giving the property as security. The commissioners, or board of equalization, was unable to determine what was the correct valuation, $2000 or $3000. It is likely the true value was nearer the amount secured by mortgage than the amount as named by the assessor. There is not an assessor in the state who will play favorites in the performance of his duty and as a consequence, should the law taxing mortgages ever be rigidly enforced, a serious tangle is bound to ensue. Should the coming legislature enact a measure creating a state tax commission, relief may be secured, but under the present system of levying assessments, an unjust discrimination will be the only result of an attempt to levy a tax upon mortgages.

Wilson Wants Progressives

President-elect Wilson, in his talk to the presidential electors of New Jersey on Monday, made plain that he intends to preempt and occupy the progressive field. He will surround himself, as president, with progressives, and only progressives. The reactionaries will be retired to the rear, and the Wilson administration will be made a progressive administration.

This takes the wind out of Col. Roosevelt's sails completely, for the colonel insists that all the progressives must be with him. But if President-elect Wilson is to make his administration distinctly a progressive administration, there will be none left to go to Col. Roosevelt on his demand that all progressives, democrats as well as republicans, should go to the progressive party.

Mr. Wilson's positive declaration on this point will be welcomed by the country, as the first clear note that he has sounded in any direction since his election. He has talked generally about matters, but now he comes down specifically to the point of progressiveness, and says that this will be the keynote of his administration.

Naturally, then, his cabinet will be composed of progressives, and so far as he can control, the action of congress will be progressive, and the country will presently see precisely what progression of the Wilson stamp means. If it means the same as Col. Bryan would make it mean, then such democrats as Senator Martin of Virginia, Underwood of Alabama, and Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, will be retired to the rear. This, however, is not to be expected. And so, while President-elect Wilson declares emphatically for progress, and says that he will make his a progressive administration there remains to be seen what he means by progress and progression. As to this we shall have to wait patiently to see how he will make up his cabinet, and who will be his favorite advisers.

Predictions that the parcel post would prove a failure, appear to have been based simply upon guess work.

Nevada is indeed fortunate. The legislature meets but once in two years.
